John Roach, an old campaigner who draws a pension from the British government, boasted in a Tonawanda, N. Y., saloon that he could beat the world drinking whiskey. On a wager Roach drank a quart of rye in just two and one half minutes. He called for a pint more, but before it was measured he dropped dead.

When Missouri's able and energetic governor was put at the head of the Louis, a long stride was taken in the race for the prize. Governor Francis has done much for St. Louis and Missouri, that no other man could have done and if he succeeds in getting the World's Fair for this state well there is no telling what the future holds in store for him.

The Baptist General association in session at Jefferson City has been wrestling with the unification problem and the northern and southern mission societies was the subject of an animated discussion. It would perhaps be as well for religious bodies whose members are divided merely on a sectional basis to avoid the question of unification until later on. Evidently the little differences of this nature will settle themselves and the effect upon the worldly is a bad one, when wrangles are made public. While the war is long since over, it still remains a principle which can not be forgotten and any attempt to force it into one current of opinion is a folly which had best be neglected.

However, he was beaten by the smallest majority of any republican candidate for gubernatorial honors in this state for a long time. About four months ago he was appointed by President Harrison to the office of United States attorney for the western district of Missouri.

The fact that the pilgrim Puritans "set apart" this date has been sufficiently honored in a century of conformity to it. These worthy people took even their festivities solemnly, and there was a certain appropriateness in their choosing the end of the bleak and dreary November for their season of "thanksgiving and praise.
